COFFEE

Indonesia produces coffee beans with unique flavor profiles that are highly valued across the globe. From the highlands of Sumatra to the volcanic plains of Java, each region offers beans with distinctive notes—earthy, full-bodied, and aromatic.

Our coffee is sourced from selected farms with a strong emphasis on quality and sustainable practices. It is suitable for various applications—roasters, instant coffee manufacturers, or specialty blends. Whether you're looking to develop a premium retail product or require raw beans for your processing line, our Indonesian coffee provides the quality and consistency global buyers expect.

PEPPER

Indonesia is one of the top producers of pepper in the world, particularly known for high-quality black and white pepper from Lampung and Bangka. The tropical climate and fertile soil in these regions provide ideal conditions for cultivating pepper with strong aroma, sharp heat, and long-lasting flavor.

Pepper is a staple ingredient used in cuisines worldwide, but it also holds importance in the pharmaceutical and spice industries. Our carefully selected pepper is sun-dried, hand-sorted, and packed to preserve its freshness and pungency. Whether you're sourcing in bulk for food production or distribution, our pepper stands out for both its taste and its traceable origin.

ARECA NUT

Known locally as “pinang,” areca nut has cultural, medicinal, and commercial value across Asia and the Middle East. Indonesia, especially regions like Sulawesi and Sumatra, produces areca nuts in large volumes thanks to favorable growing conditions and long-established farming knowledge.

Our areca nut products are typically sun-dried and sorted for export, commonly used in chewing mixtures or as raw material in the health and chemical industries. With increasing demand for natural ingredients and traditional products, Indonesian areca nut remains a relevant and valuable export item.

COCONUT

Coconuts are deeply woven into Indonesia's coastal culture, with the country ranking as one of the largest coconut producers globally. The warm, humid climate and abundant rainfall make it an ideal environment for coconut palms to thrive naturally.

From desiccated coconut and copra to husk and shell derivatives, coconut is one of the most versatile agricultural commodities. It is used in the food industry, cosmetics, biofuel, and even home goods. We supply coconuts from trusted coastal plantations where harvesting and processing are done with care to ensure top quality and usability across sectors.
